

FX: Some clarity returns

A Trump win is clearly bullish for the dollar – but the challenge will be in timing it

We're revising our EUR/USD profile forecasts lower, and we see the pair approaching parity in late 2025/early 2026

Timing the dollar rally will be key

Ahead of the US election, FX market volatility had been rising in expectation of a very uncertain outcome. In the event, a clear result emerged very quickly and volatility, at least short-term volatility, has fallen. We and the market see the result as dollar bullish – but the timing the forthcoming rally will be the main challenge.

President-elect Trump's overwhelming mandate for looser fiscal policy plus universal protectionism should drag the dollar higher over a multi-year period. Yet the dollar fell in the first year of Trump's last presidency as his administration took time to build a consensus around tax cuts and to build the case for tariffs. This time around, we think aggressive overseas easing cycles, especially in Europe, mean that the dollar can stay strong throughout. And we pencil in peak dollar strength for something like late 2025/early 2026, when Trump's new administration is firing up tariffs at a time of high US bond yields.

One topic not discussed too much in the run-up to the election was Trump's dollar policy. An interview in July had floated the idea that he wanted a weaker dollar. Invariably there will be periods of volatility and temporary dollar weakness over the coming years when the new administration opines about the need for the currencies of trading partners to strengthen. But you can't always get what you want, and the dominant mix of the new agenda will be a dollar bullish one.

In terms of a EUR/USD profile, we have revised our forecasts lower and see it approaching parity in late 2025/early 2026. Elsewhere, the prospect of a global trade war is a negative one for emerging market currencies, which are also going to struggle with higher US Treasury yields.

A more 'agile' style (shall we say) of US policymaking from 2025 also suggests traded levels of FX volatility should stay higher. This is not the kind of environment in which carry trade strategies prosper, and also supported by Bank of Japan rate hikes, the Japanese yen might offer a little more resistance than usual to a dollar rally.

Author

Chris Turner

Global Head of Markets and Regional Head of Research for UK & CEE

chris.turner@ing.com

Disclaimer

This publication has been prepared by the Economic and Financial Analysis Division of ING Bank N.V. ("ING") solely for information purposes without regard to any particular user's investment objectives, financial situation, or means. ING forms part of ING Group (being for this purpose ING Group N.V. and its subsidiary and affiliated companies). The information in the publication is not an investment recommendation and it is not investment, legal or tax advice or an offer or solicitation to purchase or sell any financial instrument. Reasonable care has been taken to ensure that this publication is not untrue or misleading when published, but ING does not represent that it is accurate or complete. ING does not accept any liability for any direct, indirect or consequential loss arising from any use of this publication. Unless otherwise stated, any views, forecasts, or estimates are solely those of the author(s), as of the date of the publication and are subject to change without notice.

The distribution of this publication may be restricted by law or regulation in different jurisdictions and persons into whose possession this publication comes should inform themselves about, and observe, such restrictions.

Copyright and database rights protection exists in this report and it may not be reproduced, distributed or published by any person for any purpose without the prior express consent of ING. All rights are reserved. ING Bank N.V. is authorised by the Dutch Central Bank and supervised by the European Central Bank (ECB), the Dutch Central Bank (DNB) and the Dutch Authority for the Financial Markets (AFM). ING Bank N.V. is incorporated in the Netherlands (Trade Register no. 33031431 Amsterdam). In the United Kingdom this information is approved and/or communicated by ING Bank N.V., London Branch. ING Bank N.V., London Branch is authorised by the Prudential Regulation Authority and is subject to regulation by the Financial Conduct Authority and limited regulation by the Prudential Regulation Authority. ING Bank N.V., London branch is registered in England (Registration number BR000341) at 8-10 Moorgate, London EC2 6DA. For US Investors: Any person wishing to discuss this report or effect transactions in any security discussed herein should contact ING Financial Markets LLC, which is a member of the NYSE, FINRA and SIPC and part of ING, and which has accepted responsibility for the distribution of this report in the United States under applicable requirements.

Additional information is available on request. For more information about ING Group, please visit <http://www.ing.com>.