GBP: Bracing for a change in leadership
Prime Minister Theresa May is expected to announce her departure date today. This should keep the pressure on the pound

Content
- USD: Too much priced in (in terms of cuts)
- EUR: Upside limited
- GBP: Bracing for the change in leadership
- CZK: Gradual depreciation underway

USD: Too much priced in (in terms of cuts)
The headline US April durable goods orders should be heavily dragged down by the transport numbers due to weak Boeing aircraft figures. But regional business surveys suggest that, outside of this component, the backdrop remains resilient. This in our view still makes the odds of a Fed rate cut this year unjustified (the market is pricing in a full 25 basis point rate cut for 2019). The lack of urgency to ease policy was also suggested by Fed speakers overnight (Robert Kaplan and Loretta Mester). This, in turn, points to a resilient dollar, particularly as concern about the ongoing trade war is unlikely to abate any time soon.

EUR: Upside limited
EUR/USD rebounded yesterday following the softer than expected US May PMI (which reflects the negativity associated with the trade war). Still, we see the EUR/USD upside as limited as the Fed is unlikely to shift towards a more dovish stance while US data should remain solid and the high USD interest rate differential prevents EUR/USD from a more persistent move upwards. EUR/USD 1.1265 level to act a near-term resistance.

GBP: Bracing for the change in leadership
Despite the prospect of higher wage growth and benign inflation (which should give UK consumer spending a modest boost), our economists look for a correction in UK retail sales following three months of strong increases. This won’t help the pound, and with the rising probability of PM May resigning (the timetable for her departure is expected to be announced today with a 10 June date being circulated in the media) and a likely incoming eurosceptic PM in summer, pressure on GBP should remain in place. EUR/GBP to test the 0.8840 level, the highest level since late January.

CZK: Gradual depreciation underway
EUR/CZK continues to grind higher, now being close to the 25.90 level. As per our April Directional Economics, we turned bearish on the Czech koruna, as the key supporting factor over recent quarters (i.e. the hawkish central bank) is now gone. Coupled with concern about global and eurozone growth prospects, this does not bode well for the overbought CZK. EUR/CZK to further converge to the 25.90 level. In our view, the level of implied EUR/CZK understates the risk of a meaningful CZK decline should investors decide to trim their one-way positioning.
Petr Krpata, CFA
Chief EMEA FX and IR Strategist
+44 20 7767 6561
petr.krpata@ing.com
Disclaimer
This publication has been prepared by the Economic and Financial Analysis Division of ING Bank N.V. ("ING") solely for information purposes without regard to any particular user's investment objectives, financial situation, or means. ING forms part of ING Group (being for this purpose ING Group NV and its subsidiary and affiliated companies). The information in the publication is not an investment recommendation and it is not investment, legal or tax advice or an offer or solicitation to purchase or sell any financial instrument. Reasonable care has been taken to ensure that this publication is not untrue or misleading when published, but ING does not represent that it is accurate or complete. ING does not accept any liability for any direct, indirect or consequential loss arising from any use of this publication. Unless otherwise stated, any views, forecasts, or estimates are solely those of the author(s), as of the date of the publication and are subject to change without notice.

The distribution of this publication may be restricted by law or regulation in different jurisdictions and persons into whose possession this publication comes should inform themselves about, and observe, such restrictions.

Copyright and database rights protection exists in this report and it may not be reproduced, distributed or published by any person for any purpose without the prior express consent of ING. All rights are reserved. The producing legal entity ING Bank N.V. is authorised by the Dutch Central Bank and supervised by the European Central Bank (ECB), the Dutch Central Bank (DNB) and the Dutch Authority for the Financial Markets (AFM). ING Bank N.V. is incorporated in the Netherlands (Trade Register no. 33031431 Amsterdam). In the United Kingdom this information is approved and/or communicated by ING Bank N.V., London Branch. ING Bank N.V., London Branch is subject to limited regulation by the Financial Conduct Authority (FCA). ING Bank N.V., London branch is registered in England (Registration number BR000341) at 8-10 Moorgate, London EC2 6DA. For US Investors: Any person wishing to discuss this report or effect transactions in any security discussed herein should contact ING Financial Markets LLC, which is a member of the NYSE, FINRA and SIPC and part of ING, and which has accepted responsibility for the distribution of this report in the United States under applicable requirements.