

Webinar: Why the Fed easing cycle will trigger the next leg lower in the dollar

Join us on 18 September for a live discussion from our panel of experts on their outlook for the direction of the dollar and key currencies across the G10 space, Asia and Central and Eastern Europe

US jobs reports may have underwhelmed this summer, but for global asset markets, they've lit a spark of optimism. Investors are now embracing the prospect of a 125-150bp Federal Reserve easing cycle – without the usual spectre of a looming recession. As the Fed pivots, consensus is building for the dollar to weaken into year-end.

Join us the day after the Fed's September decision for a live discussion of ING's latest FX Talking update. Our panel of top strategists will unpack the implications of the Fed's next move and what it means for global currencies:

- Chris Turner (Global Head of Markets) will detail ING's latest dollar outlook and explore why USD/JPY remains stubbornly elevated.
- Francesco Pesole (FX Strategist) will cover the dynamics driving the Australian and Canadian dollars, two key commodity currencies.
- Frantisek Taborsky (EMEA FX & FI Strategist) will share his view on why the Czech koruna may continue to defy gravity and hold its gains.

- Deepali Bhargava (Regional Head of Research, Asia Pacific) will discuss whether the Indian rupee can finally catch a break.
