Trump's next move as his 90-day tariff pause ends

The clock's running out on President Trump's 90-day tariff pause, set to end on 9 July. During this window, most country-specific tariffs were put on hold (except for China), while a flat 10% tariff stayed in place for most imports.

Now, with the deadline looming, Trump has hinted he might extend the pause to wrap up trade talks with more than a dozen countries, including big players like South Korea, Japan, and the EU.

Join us for a webinar with Inga Fechner (Senior Economist, ING Germany), James Knightley (Chief International Economist, New York), and Padhraic Garvey (Regional Head of Research, Americas), who will break down the possibilities and what it all means for global trade. This event will be hosted by Rebecca Byrne (Senior Editor).
