

A changing tide? Our latest monthly update

The Federal Reserve has long led the way in withdrawing monetary stimulus, but there is a sense that they could soon be joined by other increasingly confident central banks. But the challenge for central banks will be whether these moves are merely a changing of the tide for the markets, or the trigger for a tsunami of selling. Stretched asset valuations and still-subdued inflation suggest that the process may turn out to be less than smooth.

In this bundle

United Kingdom

Carney blasts back against the hawks

Comments from the Bank of England Governor today support our view that there will be no rate hike before 2019.

By James Smith

Carney blasts back against the hawks

Comments from the Bank of England Governor today support our view that there will be no rate hike before 2019.

Source: Bank of England

To most people's surprise, all three external monetary policy committee (MPC) members voted for an immediate rate hike at last week's Bank of England meeting. Over recent months, the hawks have outlined a more upbeat outlook for growth, and as a result, have consistently said they have "limited tolerance" to above-target inflation. The latest above-consensus inflation spike to 2.9% appears to have tested their patience too much.

We think Carney's view will prevail and a rate hike is unlikely before 2019

But Governor Carney, speaking at an event at London's Mansion House, left markets with little doubt that he holds completely the opposite view. Citing "anaemic" wage growth and "subdued domestic inflationary pressures", he said that "now is not the time" for a hike.

Carney's comments confirm what we noted last week, which was that it will take a lot to get the "core" MPC voters wanting to raise rates any time soon. Whilst we have seen inflation rise to 2.9%, this now means real incomes are falling noticeably.

This has led to a dramatic slowdown in consumer spending. Retail sales are now barely growing, having been rising close to 8% YoY at the end of 2016. With plenty of uncertainty surrounding Brexit, and more recently the UK political climate generally, the outlook for wages and hiring is likely to stay fairly subdued.

2.9% Latest headline inflation reading
(YoY%)

Investment is likely to stay lower too; a survey recently conducted by the Institute of Directors suggested that 57% of members were either “quite” or “very” pessimistic about the UK economy of the coming year.

For those reasons, we think that Carney's view will prevail and we are unlikely to get a rate hike before 2019. We'd expect BoE Chief Economist Haldane, who is typically fairly dovish, to take a similar line to Carney when he speaks in Yorkshire tomorrow

Author

James Smith

Developed Markets Economist, UK

james.smith@ing.com

Disclaimer

This publication has been prepared by the Economic and Financial Analysis Division of ING Bank N.V. (“ING”) solely for information purposes without regard to any particular user's investment objectives, financial situation, or means. ING forms part of ING Group (being for this purpose ING Group N.V. and its subsidiary and affiliated companies). The information in the publication is not an investment recommendation and it is not investment, legal or tax advice or an offer or solicitation to purchase or sell any financial instrument. Reasonable care has been taken to ensure that this publication is not untrue or misleading when published, but ING does not represent that it is accurate or complete. ING does not accept any liability for any direct, indirect or consequential loss arising from any use of this publication. Unless otherwise stated, any views, forecasts, or estimates are solely those of the author(s), as of the date of the publication and are subject to change without notice.

The distribution of this publication may be restricted by law or regulation in different jurisdictions and persons into whose possession this publication comes should inform themselves about, and observe, such restrictions.

Copyright and database rights protection exists in this report and it may not be reproduced, distributed or published by any person for any purpose without the prior express consent of ING. All rights are reserved. ING Bank N.V. is authorised by the Dutch Central Bank and supervised by the European Central Bank (ECB), the Dutch Central Bank (DNB) and the Dutch Authority for the Financial Markets (AFM). ING Bank N.V. is incorporated in the Netherlands (Trade Register no. 33031431 Amsterdam). In the United Kingdom this information is approved and/or communicated by ING Bank N.V., London Branch. ING Bank N.V., London Branch is authorised by the Prudential Regulation Authority and is subject to regulation by the Financial Conduct Authority and limited regulation by the Prudential Regulation Authority. ING Bank N.V., London branch is registered in England (Registration number BR000341) at 8-10 Moorgate, London EC2 6DA. For US Investors: Any person wishing to discuss this report or effect transactions in any security discussed herein should contact ING Financial Markets LLC, which is a member of the NYSE, FINRA and SIPC and part of ING, and which has accepted responsibility for the distribution of this report in the United States under applicable requirements.

Additional information is available on request. For more information about ING Group, please visit <http://www.ing.com>.