

Extensions coming

US President Trump is reported to be offering an extension to the March 1 trade talks deadline. Theresa May is not talking about extending article 50, but she may have no choice. Nerves are getting frayed (mine anyway).

Donald Trump, Xi Jinping. President Donald Trump, right, with China's President Xi Jinping, left

Source: Shutterstock

More optimism on trade

This is yet to be verified, but a story appearing on my phone on my way into work this morning suggested that the US President was pleased with the progress being made on trade talks and was looking to extend the talks' deadline from March 1, to allow him and President Xi to thrash out the last remaining details. These seem to surround some commitment from China to running a stable currency regime, whatever that means? However, as the US seems to want this made quite formal, not just a vague and unenforceable commitment, this still has the potential to stymie a deal.

Personally, I suspect from China's perspective, a more flexible currency but more stable credit markets would be a better choice - providing more macro stability. Let us hope that this is not a commitment that China lives to regret in time. The merits of handcuffing the economy to a particular set of rules may seem worthwhile in the short term, but things have a nasty knack of changing. Even a particularly cosy fleece-lined set of handcuffs may come to chafe in time (i'm guessing...)

As for how long these final talks will take, we wrote before that this was a very artificial deadline, and it was in both sides interests to reach a satisfactory outcome, so the deadline was never likely to be binding in any case.

Next deadline please

The next deadline of note is the March 12 "binding vote" for UK MPs on what I suspect will be a virtually unchanged Brexit bill. Certainly, the UK attorney General does not seem to have registered any meaningful change to the Irish backstop question after recent talks and "assurances" from his European counterparts. So I don't expect the European Research Group of Conservative MPs to have changed their mind either. The chances of Theresa May getting this bill through parliament look thinner than ever. Running the clock down was supposed to cause MPs to rally round the only deal on the table. But that isn't happening. Instead, it looks more likely that on March 13, the Cooper / Letwin bill is passed to allow for a delay to Brexit, more negotiation and give parliament more of a say in what actually happens.

So, this is not, as some are calling it, a "Final vote" on the 12th. But it may be the final vote that precedes a delay to article 50. The announcement of a delay will reduce fear of a no-deal Brexit, and provide a little support for sterling, which is looking a little firmer today on that prospect.

If you haven't read it yet, this is a good day to read James Smith's latest on this issue.

Asia day ahead

There is very little on the Asian calendar today except for Singapore CPI for January. The MAS is not an inflation targeter as such, though if it were, it would probably find some solace in core rates of inflation, just shy of 2.0%. These will likely stay at or perhaps drift slightly lower than last month's 1.9%YoY rate. That said, I am unconvinced that the MAS core measure of inflation is an appropriate yardstick for assessing the underlying state of demand / supply conditions in the economy. Headline inflation has undershot core for so long now that it is not very credible to argue that core is providing a better indication of longer-run inflation trends. But markets probably won't be too moved by these figures unless they contain some real shockers.

New Zealand 4Q18 retail sales (minus inflation) surprised with a 1.7% bounce after a slightly upwards revised 0.3% rise (initially 0.0%) in 3Q18. While we don't cover this economy in depth, we do watch the currency and central bank, and we have been favouring the NZD over the AUD. We are looking for economic newsflow to help push the AUDNZD rate below 1.04 where it seems to be finding resistance. Today's data will help soften that resistance. 4Q18 GDP data is not released until March 21. But on the back of this retail release, it could also provide some support.

Author

Robert Carnell

Regional Head of Research, Asia-Pacific

robert.carnell@asia.ing.com

Disclaimer

This publication has been prepared by the Economic and Financial Analysis Division of ING Bank N.V. ("ING") solely for information purposes without regard to any particular user's investment objectives, financial situation, or means. ING forms part of ING Group (being for this purpose ING Group N.V. and its subsidiary and affiliated companies). The information in the publication is not an investment recommendation and it is not investment, legal or tax advice or an offer or solicitation to purchase or sell any financial instrument. Reasonable care has been taken to ensure that this publication is not untrue or misleading when published, but ING does not represent that it is accurate or complete. ING does not accept any liability for any direct, indirect or consequential loss arising from any use of this publication. Unless otherwise stated, any views, forecasts, or estimates are solely those of the author(s), as of the date of the publication and are subject to change without notice.

The distribution of this publication may be restricted by law or regulation in different jurisdictions and persons into whose possession this publication comes should inform themselves about, and observe, such restrictions.

Copyright and database rights protection exists in this report and it may not be reproduced, distributed or published by any person for any purpose without the prior express consent of ING. All rights are reserved. ING Bank N.V. is authorised by the Dutch Central Bank and supervised by the European Central Bank (ECB), the Dutch Central Bank (DNB) and the Dutch Authority for the Financial Markets (AFM). ING Bank N.V. is incorporated in the Netherlands (Trade Register no. 33031431 Amsterdam). In the United Kingdom this information is approved and/or communicated by ING Bank N.V., London Branch. ING Bank N.V., London Branch is authorised by the Prudential Regulation Authority and is subject to regulation by the Financial Conduct Authority and limited regulation by the Prudential Regulation Authority. ING Bank N.V., London branch is registered in England (Registration number BR000341) at 8-10 Moorgate, London EC2 6DA. For US Investors: Any person wishing to discuss this report or effect transactions in any security discussed herein should contact ING Financial Markets LLC, which is a member of the NYSE, FINRA and SIPC and part of ING, and which has accepted responsibility for the distribution of this report in the United States under applicable requirements.

Additional information is available on request. For more information about ING Group, please visit <http://www.ing.com>.