

Trade: All is well (give it a few weeks)

An olive branch from China, but this trade war is far from over. We don't think China is about to acquiesce without the US removing a lot of existing tariffs and holding off from new ones, and the US needs a big concession from China on IP and openness, or it too will appear weak.

Take the good news while it lasts

Markets opened with a positive hue this morning in response to China's offering to delay the introduction of new tariffs on the US in retaliation to the US' latest round of tariffs. President Trump told Fox News yesterday that talks with China on trade will occur today, though there are no more details.

Amidst signs that the US may be slowing faster than expected in 2Q19, could it be that US President Trump is about to look for a way to restore calm to markets by finding some sort of deal or truce with China?

Personally, I doubt it. For a number of reasons. Here are a few off the top of my head:

1. President Trump most likely believes that the US is weathering the trade war better than China - that is a moot point, but it doesn't matter what I think.
2. US public opinion would not welcome a weak trade deal with China as much as they would not welcome a slowing economy. This is a trade-off.
3. The decision to call off a trade war is as much a decision for China as it is for the US, and the sort of deal that China needs to get - reversal of existing tariffs, curtailment of new tariffs, better treatment for Huawei and other tech companies, is exactly the sort of deal that the US cannot deliver without appearing to cave in.

I won't go on.

So yes, markets are happy today as a goldfish is with a new rock in the tank to swim around, and around, and around.

I'd be gearing up for the next down-leg personally.

And Iris agrees..

Don't just take my word for it, here's what our Greater China Economist, Iris Pang thinks on the subject: "China's Ministry of Commerce said that to continue to have trade talks there must be necessary conditions for both sides. For China, this means the US would need to cancel the planned tariff increases.

I believe the market has interpreted recent developments too positively. It will be very difficult for President Trump to back down so quickly. It is also completely uncertain if there will be meaningful trade talks in September. Even if there are, both sides may just reaffirm to the other side their pre-conditions for further talks. And for both, this is likely to be that the other side first needs to make concessions. This implies no progress".

India GDP to buck weakening trend

India's GDP figure for the April-June quarter (1Q FY2019-20) today should testify to the elevated concern over growth evident from the massive stimulus the authorities have unleashed this year. However, the consensus of just a tenth of a percent dip in growth (5.7% from 5.8% in 4Q FY2018-19) doesn't quite come across as really worrisome. Nor do firmer exports and manufacturing growth suggest any real growth slowdown. Yes, there have been some pockets of weakness evident from slowing car sales and bank lending, though this largely reflects policy lags (pointed out by an RBI policymaker in the latest policy minutes) with less than 40% of the rate cuts so far being transmitted to the banking system.

We believe growth, in fact, improved in the reporting period to 6.0% making the additional RBI easing by 35bp rate cut earlier this month unnecessary. If so, we would reconsider our view of an additional 50bp of RBI rate cuts in the rest of the year, which isn't really a conviction call, but merely reflects the fact that the central bank is under pressure from the government to do more. (From Prakash Sakpal)

BoK - to hold today

We don't expect the BoK to follow up their July rate cut decision with another at today's meeting.

1. The KRW at 1209 is already very weak
2. The BoK will not want to front-run the US Fed
3. Following yesterday's budget there is less need to use monetary policy
4. Production data today hint that the electronics cycle is troughing - better news for growth.

The final point is good news not just for Korea. We also see evidence of an electronics cycle trough in data from Singapore, which may just side-step a feared recession as a result. So there is some genuine good news out there. I just don't think you should over-do it.

Author

Robert Carnell

Regional Head of Research, Asia-Pacific

robert.carnell@asia.ing.com

Disclaimer

This publication has been prepared by the Economic and Financial Analysis Division of ING Bank N.V. ("ING") solely for information purposes without regard to any particular user's investment objectives, financial situation, or means. ING forms part of ING Group (being for this purpose ING Group N.V. and its subsidiary and affiliated companies). The information in the publication is not an investment recommendation and it is not investment, legal or tax advice or an offer or solicitation to purchase or sell any financial instrument. Reasonable care has been taken to ensure that this publication is not untrue or misleading when published, but ING does not represent that it is accurate or complete. ING does not accept any liability for any direct, indirect or consequential loss arising from any use of this publication. Unless otherwise stated, any views, forecasts, or estimates are solely those of the author(s), as of the date of the publication and are subject to change without notice.

The distribution of this publication may be restricted by law or regulation in different jurisdictions and persons into whose possession this publication comes should inform themselves about, and observe, such restrictions.

Copyright and database rights protection exists in this report and it may not be reproduced, distributed or published by any person for any purpose without the prior express consent of ING. All rights are reserved. ING Bank N.V. is authorised by the Dutch Central Bank and supervised by the European Central Bank (ECB), the Dutch Central Bank (DNB) and the Dutch Authority for the Financial Markets (AFM). ING Bank N.V. is incorporated in the Netherlands (Trade Register no. 33031431 Amsterdam). In the United Kingdom this information is approved and/or communicated by ING Bank N.V., London Branch. ING Bank N.V., London Branch is authorised by the Prudential Regulation Authority and is subject to regulation by the Financial Conduct Authority and limited regulation by the Prudential Regulation Authority. ING Bank N.V., London branch is registered in England (Registration number BR000341) at 8-10 Moorgate, London EC2 6DA. For US Investors: Any person wishing to discuss this report or effect transactions in any security discussed herein should contact ING Financial Markets LLC, which is a member of the NYSE, FINRA and SIPC and part of ING, and which has accepted responsibility for the distribution of this report in the United States under applicable requirements.

Additional information is available on request. For more information about ING Group, please visit www.ing.com.