

Australia: Inflation falls within the target range

The headline inflation rate has fallen within the Reserve Bank of Australia's (RBA) target range for the first time since October 2021. We do not think this merits an immediate re-think of the rate outlook. There are a lot of moving parts to this set of data, any one of which could reverse in the coming months.

Source: Shutterstock

2.7% August inflation
YoY%

As expected

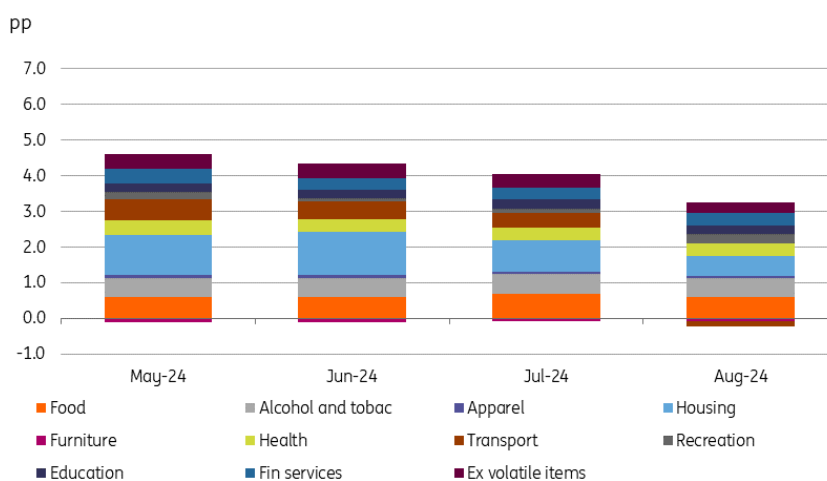

Inflation is back in the RBA's target range

Headline inflation was only 2.7% YoY in August, lower than we had been forecasting (3.3%) but in line with the market consensus. And if you care about rounding, it was very close to coming in at

2.6% YoY.

The chart below shows the contribution to the year-on-year inflation rate. Except for transport, which delivered an entirely predictable drag on the headline, the much lower inflation figure looks as if it is mainly the result of the smaller contribution than normal from housing, which itself owes to big falls in electricity prices in August. Electricity prices fell 14.5% MoM, and this led the housing component as a whole to fall 1.3% MoM. Adding to this were some very slightly smaller contributions to inflation from several other components (food, alcohol and tobacco and apparel), which offset a slightly higher contribution from recreation. The net result was as reported.

Contribution to YoY inflation (pp)

Decent moves in the core indices too

Despite much of the downswing in inflation in August coming from energy prices, fuel and food, there were also reasonable declines in some of the measures of core inflation. The trimmed mean fell from 3.8% YoY to 3.4%, the all-items ex-volatile elements dropped from 3.5% to 2.9%, and the all-items ex-volatile and holidays fell from 3.7% to 3.0% YoY.

We think the RBA will want to see the trimmed mean inflation rate below 3% for a couple of months before it even considers easing policy, though it is clear from today's numbers that it is getting closer to that goal.

That said, we still believe that rate cuts are a story for 1Q25, not 4Q24. The market reaction to today's inflation numbers was also muted. There was a small increase in implied easing by the 10 December RBA meeting, which is now about 78% (of a 25bp cut) priced in. But this is only a small increase from 72% yesterday. There was far more movement in implied easing following the omission of any reference to a discussion of hiking in the RBA's statement earlier this week.

Monthly measures of core inflation

Author

Robert Carnell

Regional Head of Research, Asia-Pacific

robert.carnell@asia.ing.com

Disclaimer

This publication has been prepared by the Economic and Financial Analysis Division of ING Bank N.V. (“ING”) solely for information purposes without regard to any particular user’s investment objectives, financial situation, or means. ING forms part of ING Group (being for this purpose ING Group N.V. and its subsidiary and affiliated companies). The information in the publication is not an investment recommendation and it is not investment, legal or tax advice or an offer or solicitation to purchase or sell any financial instrument. Reasonable care has been taken to ensure that this publication is not untrue or misleading when published, but ING does not represent that it is accurate or complete. ING does not accept any liability for any direct, indirect or consequential loss arising from any use of this publication. Unless otherwise stated, any views, forecasts, or estimates are solely those of the author(s), as of the date of the publication and are subject to change without notice.

The distribution of this publication may be restricted by law or regulation in different jurisdictions and persons into whose possession this publication comes should inform themselves about, and observe, such restrictions.

Copyright and database rights protection exists in this report and it may not be reproduced, distributed or published by any person for any purpose without the prior express consent of ING. All rights are reserved. ING Bank N.V. is authorised by the Dutch Central Bank and supervised by the European Central Bank (ECB), the Dutch Central Bank (DNB) and the Dutch Authority for the Financial Markets (AFM). ING Bank N.V. is incorporated in the Netherlands (Trade Register no. 33031431 Amsterdam). In the United Kingdom this information is approved and/or communicated by ING Bank N.V., London Branch. ING Bank N.V., London Branch is authorised by the Prudential Regulation Authority and is subject to regulation by the Financial Conduct Authority and limited regulation by the Prudential Regulation Authority. ING Bank N.V., London branch is registered in England (Registration number BR000341) at 8-10 Moorgate, London EC2 6DA. For US Investors: Any person wishing to discuss this report or effect transactions in any security discussed herein should contact ING Financial Markets LLC, which is a member of the NYSE, FINRA and SIPC and part of ING, and which has accepted responsibility for the distribution of this report in the United States under applicable requirements.

Additional information is available on request. For more information about ING Group, please visit www.ing.com.