

Bank of Japan maintains ultra-low rates

The Bank of Japan has decided to keep its current monetary policy stance despite the rest of the world moving in the opposite direction, and despite growing concerns over a weak Japanese yen

Bank of Japan
Governor Haruhiko
Kuroda

Bank of Japan governor strengthens his defense of today's rate decision

Japan's central bank kept its ultra-low interest rates on hold, going against other policymakers around the world who have been hiking rates to tackle soaring inflation.

The Bank of Japan (BoJ) appears to have decided to strengthen its credibility in the market and try to tame the market's hopes for a policy adjustment. The BoJ's firm stance was once again revealed as it confirmed its focus on supporting the economy. However, this doesn't mean that the market will necessarily believe the central bank's future policy action. Despite Governor Haruhiko Kuroda's comments, we expect the market to continue to price in policy change potential as the current policy is not sustainable in the current global economic situation. The rate differential with other economies will keep widening, thus the markets' bet against the Japanese yen (JPY) is likely to strengthen for a while.

Interestingly, Bank of Japan's statement mentioned the need to pay attention to developments in the FX market, but Governor Kuroda downplayed this later on at the press conference and repeated his usual rhetoric about the currency: that a rapid yen weakness is negative and not desirable for the economy. He also reiterated that the BoJ is not considering a policy change, noting that the “yield curve control is not reaching a limit”.

CPI will be key to watch

We think that any policy tweaks in the near term are not feasible yet, but the likelihood will increase later this year. The government’s subsidy programmes for fuel and imported food can partially limit cost-push inflation pressure, while reopening and consumption stimulus packages can drive up prices for services and possibly for wages. May CPI results come out next week (market consensus: 2.5%, ING forecast 2.7%) and we will monitor them carefully for signs of demand-side pressures building up.

Author

Min Joo Kang

Senior Economist, South Korea and Japan

min.joo.kang@asia.ing.com

Disclaimer

This publication has been prepared by the Economic and Financial Analysis Division of ING Bank N.V. (“ING”) solely for information purposes without regard to any particular user’s investment objectives, financial situation, or means. ING forms part of ING Group (being for this purpose ING Group N.V. and its subsidiary and affiliated companies). The information in the publication is not an investment recommendation and it is not investment, legal or tax advice or an offer or solicitation to purchase or sell any financial instrument. Reasonable care has been taken to ensure that this publication is not untrue or misleading when published, but ING does not represent that it is accurate or complete. ING does not accept any liability for any direct, indirect or consequential loss arising from any use of this publication. Unless otherwise stated, any views, forecasts, or estimates are solely those of the author(s), as of the date of the publication and are subject to change without notice.

The distribution of this publication may be restricted by law or regulation in different jurisdictions and persons into whose possession this publication comes should inform themselves about, and observe, such restrictions.

Copyright and database rights protection exists in this report and it may not be reproduced, distributed or published by any person for any purpose without the prior express consent of ING. All rights are reserved. ING Bank N.V. is authorised by the Dutch Central Bank and supervised by the European Central Bank (ECB), the Dutch Central Bank (DNB) and the Dutch Authority for the Financial Markets (AFM). ING Bank N.V. is incorporated in the Netherlands (Trade Register no. 33031431 Amsterdam). In the United Kingdom this information is approved and/or communicated by ING Bank N.V., London Branch. ING Bank N.V., London Branch is authorised by the Prudential Regulation Authority and is subject to regulation by the Financial Conduct Authority and limited regulation by the Prudential Regulation Authority. ING Bank N.V., London branch is registered in England (Registration number BR000341) at 8-10 Moorgate, London EC2 6DA. For US Investors: Any person wishing to discuss this report or effect transactions in any security discussed herein should contact ING Financial Markets LLC, which is a member of the NYSE, FINRA and SIPC and part of ING, and which has accepted responsibility for the distribution of this report in the United States under applicable requirements.

Additional information is available on request. For more information about ING Group, please visit www.ing.com.