Moody's review tonight. We do not expect any action

➔ EUR/RON

The EUR/RON tested higher yesterday on decent turnover for a summer day, but the pair failed to break above 4.7400. As bond inflows resumed for the 12-year auction, selling interest emerged later in the day pushing the currency pair near 4.7340. Range for today: 4.7300-4.7400.

📌 Government bonds

The ROMGB yield curve shifted lower yesterday while steepening a bit, as most of the buying interest was in the belly segment which pushed yields down c.6 basis points. The 10-year yield decreased c.3bp to 4.56% mid. The Ministry of Finance sold RON400 million, as planned, in 12Y bonds at an average/maximum yield of 4.85%/4.87% with a bid-to-cover ratio at 2.1x. Moody's review due tonight is somewhat weighing on sentiment, but we do not expect any action from the rating agency.

📌 Money market

Funding rates dropped c.60bp yesterday, closing just above the NBR deposit facility of 1.50%, as liquidity is likely to stay in excess until the end of the current reserve maintenance period. The NBR is expected to organise a fixed rate deposit taking auction on Monday with full allotment.
