

ECB: Waiting for the summer

This was an ECB meeting which had “see you in June” written all over it. In fact, there was very little news from the central bank, except for a reshuffling of the introductory statement, putting forward guidance on rates at the top and trying to hush any discussion on possible tapering. It’s a safe bet: the June meeting will be much more exciting

ECB President Christine Lagarde in Brussels

Source: Shutterstock

The European Central Bank's macro-economic assessment has not changed since the March meeting. As ECB President Christine Lagarde explained during the press conference, there are still many uncertainties regarding the economic outlook, with the first signs of a bottoming out and sufficient arguments to see the expected recovery unfold. Therefore, the assessment that medium-term risks were more balanced was confirmed. Regarding inflation, the ECB still expects a subdued increase in core inflation this year and a gradual increase in headline inflation over the medium term.

In the run-up to today's meeting, there had been growing speculation about when the ECB could start tapering its bond purchases. During the press conference, Lagarde said that the Bank had not discussed this topic at all and that such a discussion was “premature”. Indeed, in our view, such a discussion is premature today. But what happened to the forward-looking character of monetary policy?

On the lighter side, today's meeting at least spared us from any 'holistic', 'downstream' or 'upstream' terms. And today's meeting was never expected to be a killer one anyway. Instead, expect the June meeting to be very exciting. If the more optimistic projections for the vaccination rollout really materialise – the media reported today about Germany stopping the prioritisation of certain age groups by the end of May – some 50% of all eurozone citizens could have had a first jab when the ECB meets next, on 10 June. If this is the case, the next batch of staff projections could show an upward revision to the growth forecasts and a confirmation of the economic recovery in the second half of the year. Combined with a further acceleration of inflation (forecasts) on the back of higher input prices and the German VAT reversal, there will be sufficient ingredients at the June meeting to have a serious discussion about the timing of tapering. They won't decide on this imminently but with a further improvement in economic prospects and herd immunity within reach, the ratio for a Pandemic Emergency Purchase Programme being in place will weaken by the week. Consequently, there will be a point in time, and probably not in the too distant future, at which the ECB will have to make up its mind on how to moderate a rotation away from PEPP to the 'old' asset purchase programme (currently running at 20bn euro per month) and hence a very gradual exit from its so-called unconventional measures.

Author

Carsten Brzeski

Global Head of Macro

carsten.brzeski@ing.de

Disclaimer

This publication has been prepared by the Economic and Financial Analysis Division of ING Bank N.V. ("ING") solely for information purposes without regard to any particular user's investment objectives, financial situation, or means. ING forms part of ING Group (being for this purpose ING Group N.V. and its subsidiary and affiliated companies). The information in the publication is not an investment recommendation and it is not investment, legal or tax advice or an offer or solicitation to purchase or sell any financial instrument. Reasonable care has been taken to ensure that this publication is not untrue or misleading when published, but ING does not represent that it is accurate or complete. ING does not accept any liability for any direct, indirect or consequential loss arising from any use of this publication. Unless otherwise stated, any views, forecasts, or estimates are solely those of the author(s), as of the date of the publication and are subject to change without notice.

The distribution of this publication may be restricted by law or regulation in different jurisdictions and persons into whose possession this publication comes should inform themselves about, and observe, such restrictions.

Copyright and database rights protection exists in this report and it may not be reproduced, distributed or published by any person for any purpose without the prior express consent of ING. All rights are reserved. ING Bank N.V. is authorised by the Dutch Central Bank and supervised by the European Central Bank (ECB), the Dutch Central Bank (DNB) and the Dutch Authority for the Financial Markets (AFM). ING Bank N.V. is incorporated in the Netherlands (Trade Register no. 33031431 Amsterdam). In the United Kingdom this information is approved and/or communicated by ING Bank N.V., London Branch. ING Bank N.V., London Branch is authorised by the Prudential Regulation Authority and is subject to regulation by the Financial Conduct Authority and limited regulation by the Prudential Regulation Authority. ING Bank N.V., London branch is registered in England (Registration number BR000341) at 8-10 Moorgate, London EC2 6DA. For US Investors: Any person wishing to discuss this report or effect transactions in any security discussed herein should contact ING Financial Markets LLC, which is a member of the NYSE, FINRA and SIPC and part of ING, and which has accepted responsibility for the distribution of this report in the United States under applicable requirements.

Additional information is available on request. For more information about ING Group, please visit www.ing.com.