

Euro Summit: Baby steps on eurozone reform

Eurozone government leaders signed off finance ministers' proposals for future eurozone reforms. There is some progress, a eurozone budget is even still alive, but the window of opportunity is clearly closing

These days, the crucial reforms to the European Monetary Union are almost an afterthought to the Brexit discussions at European Council meetings. Today's Euro Summit conclusion was no exception. The slow train of institutional reform is moving but only at a snail's pace.

European leaders have been working towards significant further reforms of the monetary union for almost 18 months. Today's meeting was supposed to mark the climax of these efforts. It was almost an anti-climax. Eurozone leaders only agreed to the bare minimum, postponing many crucial decisions to June next year.

Progress? Only the bare minimum

The Summit endorsed the suggested reforms to the ESM and asked the eurogroup (the eurozone ministers of finance) to make sure the ESM treaty can be amended by June next year. The suggested reforms would make the process of applying to the ESM more transparent. On top of that, the Euro Summit agreed with the roadmap towards the common backstop to the Single Resolution Fund (SRF). There is still a ways to go in realising this, as sufficient progress has to be made in terms of risk reduction. This will only be assessed by 2020.

Further progress regarding the banking and capital markets union was not made but decisions were delayed at least until Spring next year. Some hope was held that today would provide some concrete results about the eurozone budget, which has been discussed for quite some time now. While there initially seemed to be agreement between Germany and France on the matter, a eurozone budget will not be swiftly implemented. After the deadlock at the last eurogroup meeting, eurozone leaders today at least kept the idea of a eurozone budget alive, deciding that finance ministers should continue working on possible plans for implementation, timing and design of the budget. A final proposal should be tabled in June next year. The size of this budget as well as its purpose and financing, much discussed and highly contended, therefore also remains unclear.

Small steps into the right direction, but...

In sum, as much as European leaders stand united in the Brexit negotiations, they continue to be widely divided when it comes to further eurozone reforms. Today's results were just a signing off of a small compromise. The risk of this approach is that once the EU budget has been agreed upon and the ESM Treaty has been amended, the window of opportunity for far-reaching reforms will be closed again. As it looks right now, the eurozone will first have to face another existential crisis before government leaders give up on the strategy of taking incremental baby steps.

Author

Bert Colijn

Chief Economist, Netherlands

bert.colijn@ing.com

Carsten Brzeski

Global Head of Macro

carsten.brzeski@ing.de

Disclaimer

This publication has been prepared by the Economic and Financial Analysis Division of ING Bank N.V. ("ING") solely for information purposes without regard to any particular user's investment objectives, financial situation, or means. ING forms part of ING Group (being for this purpose ING Group N.V. and its subsidiary and affiliated companies). The information in the publication is not an investment recommendation and it is not investment, legal or tax advice or an offer or solicitation to purchase or sell any financial instrument. Reasonable care has been taken to ensure that this publication is not untrue or misleading when published, but ING does not represent that it is accurate or complete. ING does not accept any liability for any direct, indirect or consequential loss arising from any use of this publication. Unless otherwise stated, any views, forecasts, or estimates are solely those of the author(s), as of the date of the publication and are subject to change without notice.

The distribution of this publication may be restricted by law or regulation in different jurisdictions and persons into whose possession this publication comes should inform themselves about, and observe, such restrictions.

Copyright and database rights protection exists in this report and it may not be reproduced, distributed or published by any person for any purpose without the prior express consent of ING. All rights are reserved. ING Bank N.V. is authorised by the Dutch Central Bank and supervised by the European Central Bank (ECB), the Dutch Central Bank (DNB) and the Dutch Authority for the Financial Markets (AFM). ING Bank N.V. is incorporated in the Netherlands (Trade Register no. 33031431 Amsterdam). In the United Kingdom this information is approved and/or communicated by ING Bank N.V., London Branch. ING Bank N.V., London Branch is authorised by the Prudential Regulation Authority and is subject to regulation by the Financial Conduct Authority and limited regulation by the Prudential Regulation Authority. ING Bank N.V., London branch is registered in England (Registration number BR000341) at 8-10 Moorgate, London EC2 6DA. For US Investors: Any person wishing to discuss this report or effect transactions in any security discussed herein should contact ING Financial Markets LLC, which is a member of the NYSE, FINRA and SIPC and part of ING, and which has accepted responsibility for the distribution of this report in the United States under applicable requirements.

Additional information is available on request. For more information about ING Group, please visit www.ing.com.