

Why French inflation should remain cool in 2025

French inflation was slightly lower than expected in January and should remain subdued over the course of 2025

We expect inflation in France to remain close to its current level throughout 2025 before returning to close to 2% in 2026

Inflation in France was slightly lower than expected in January, coming in at 1.4% according to the national index and 1.8% according to the harmonised index. For the European Central Bank, the figures are clearly good news. Inflation in services continues to normalise, coming in at 1.9% year-on-year, compared with 2.2% in December. Manufactured goods prices have rebounded slightly, but goods inflation remains sluggish at 0.2%, compared with a fall of 0.4% in December. Food prices were virtually unchanged year-on-year, while tobacco prices slowed to 6% year-on-year from 8.7% in December.

Conversely, in the wake of market developments, energy prices rebounded in January, with annual growth of 2.8% compared with 1.2% in December. This rebound in energy inflation is temporary, however, because regulated electricity tariffs will fall by 15% on 1 February 2025, which will mean a fall in electricity prices of 11-12% on average for all households.

Looking ahead, services price inflation could continue to fall given the slower growth in labour costs and the sluggish economic situation. On the other hand, the rise in expectations for selling prices in the manufacturing sector according to business surveys means that goods prices could accelerate slightly. The reduction of the eco-bonus on cars will also push up manufactured goods inflation a little in the coming months. However, these increases should remain moderate as demand remains weak.

Finally, food inflation is set to rebound, given the trend in agricultural commodity prices on world markets, and could come close to 2% year-on-year growth. However, the outcome of the current trade negotiations in the supermarket sector could temper the increase.

Taking all these factors together, we expect overall inflation in France to remain close to the current level on average over 2025, before returning to close to 2% in 2026.

Author

Charlotte de Montpellier

Senior Economist, France and Switzerland

charlotte.de.montpellier@ing.com

Disclaimer

This publication has been prepared by the Economic and Financial Analysis Division of ING Bank N.V. ("ING") solely for information purposes without regard to any particular user's investment objectives, financial situation, or means. ING forms part of ING Group (being for this purpose ING Group N.V. and its subsidiary and affiliated companies). The information in the publication is not an investment recommendation and it is not investment, legal or tax advice or an offer or solicitation to purchase or sell any financial instrument. Reasonable care has been taken to ensure that this publication is not untrue or misleading when published, but ING does not represent that it is accurate or complete. ING does not accept any liability for any direct, indirect or consequential loss arising from any use of this publication. Unless otherwise stated, any views, forecasts, or estimates are solely those of the author(s), as of the date of the publication and are subject to change without notice.

The distribution of this publication may be restricted by law or regulation in different jurisdictions and persons into whose possession this publication comes should inform themselves about, and observe, such restrictions.

Copyright and database rights protection exists in this report and it may not be reproduced, distributed or published by any person for any purpose without the prior express consent of ING. All rights are reserved. ING Bank N.V. is authorised by the Dutch Central Bank and supervised by the European Central Bank (ECB), the Dutch Central Bank (DNB) and the Dutch Authority for the Financial Markets (AFM). ING Bank N.V. is incorporated in the Netherlands (Trade Register no. 33031431 Amsterdam). In the United Kingdom this information is approved and/or communicated by ING Bank N.V., London Branch. ING Bank N.V., London Branch is authorised by the Prudential Regulation Authority and is subject to regulation by the Financial Conduct Authority and limited regulation by the Prudential Regulation Authority. ING Bank N.V., London branch is registered in England (Registration number BR000341) at 8-10 Moorgate, London EC2 6DA. For US Investors: Any person wishing to discuss this report or effect transactions in any security discussed herein should contact ING Financial Markets LLC, which is a member of the NYSE, FINRA and SIPC and part of ING, and which has accepted responsibility for the distribution of this report in the United States under applicable requirements.

Additional information is available on request. For more information about ING Group, please visit <http://www.ing.com>.