

NBR review: Better treat uncertainties seriously

The National Bank of Romania (NBR) kept the policy rate on hold at 6.50%, in line with our expectations. Policymakers highlighted the need for caution due to both internal and external risks. We retain our view that rates will remain in place through year-end, with downside risks at play

Mugur Isarescu, Governor of the Romanian National Bank

The NBR's decision to hold fire came on the back of multiple factors at play. Firstly, on the internal front, inflation in the services sector remains especially problematic. What's more, this year's significant drought brings heightened risks of a revival in food inflation moving forward. Elsewhere, upside risks and stimulus stemming from ever-growing budget deficit targets, vigorous credit activity, and double-digit wage growth were also significant.

Secondly, in external markets, the Middle East conflict has become less and less contained, acting as a significant upside risk for both oil and shipping costs (see our detailed analysis on this here). Even if the worst-case scenario of a large-scale conflict is avoided, some of the recent gains in the inflation outlook due to lower oil prices driven by global demand fears will be lost.

All of these elements likely led the NBR to adjust its inflation path higher and likely reconsider the upside risks in what could be interpreted as the rather hawkish part of its communication. The next inflation report in November will shed more on light that. Meanwhile, policymakers also acknowledged that the weaker-than-expected growth over the first half of the year could potentially induce a visible cooling effect over excess aggregate demand, contrary to their expectations.

The supply side of the economy is also in a weakening state. In the services sector, pockets of strength can be spotted only in civil engineering activities, which are boosted by large-scale public investments. Other than that, activity is rather lacklustre, including in the all-important IT sector, which flashed red recently. Manufacturing-wise, a prolonged state of weakness in exports is our base case.

All in all, we expect the Bank to remain cautious for the rest of this year and keep rates in place until January 2025 at the earliest. While the NBR has so far used some of the available policy space provided by the relatively well-behaved disinflation trend, we think that from now on policymakers will start to add more and more weight to the medium-term risks for inflation in their decision-making.

We don't exclude a 25bp rate cut in November – but in the absence of a higher-than-expected decline in September's inflation and a cooling of the upside risks stemming from the Middle East conflict until then, this is not our base case. For 2025, we foresee a total of 100bp of rate cuts, taking the key rate to 5.50%.

Authors

Stefan Posea

Economist, Romania

tiberiu-stefan.posea@ing.com

Valentin Tataru

Chief Economist, Romania

valentin.tataru@ing.com

Disclaimer

This publication has been prepared by the Economic and Financial Analysis Division of ING Bank N.V. (“ING”) solely for information purposes without regard to any particular user's investment objectives, financial situation, or means. ING forms part of ING Group (being for this purpose ING Group N.V. and its subsidiary and affiliated companies). The information in the publication is not an investment recommendation and it is not investment, legal or tax advice or an offer or solicitation to purchase or sell any financial instrument. Reasonable care has been taken to ensure that this publication is not untrue or misleading when published, but ING does not represent that it is accurate or complete. ING does not accept any liability for any direct, indirect or consequential loss arising from any use of this publication. Unless otherwise stated, any views, forecasts, or estimates are solely those of the author(s), as of the date of the publication and are subject to change without notice.

The distribution of this publication may be restricted by law or regulation in different jurisdictions and persons into whose possession this publication comes should inform themselves about, and observe, such restrictions.

Copyright and database rights protection exists in this report and it may not be reproduced, distributed or published by any person for any purpose without the prior express consent of ING. All rights are reserved. ING Bank N.V. is authorised by the Dutch Central Bank and supervised by the European Central Bank (ECB), the Dutch Central Bank (DNB) and the Dutch Authority for the Financial Markets (AFM). ING Bank N.V. is incorporated in the Netherlands (Trade Register no. 33031431 Amsterdam). In the United Kingdom this information is approved and/or communicated by ING Bank N.V., London Branch. ING Bank N.V., London Branch is authorised by the Prudential Regulation Authority and is subject to regulation by the Financial Conduct Authority and limited regulation by the Prudential Regulation Authority. ING Bank N.V., London branch is registered in England (Registration number BR000341) at 8-10 Moorgate, London EC2 6DA. For US Investors: Any person wishing to discuss this report or effect transactions in any security discussed herein should contact ING Financial Markets LLC, which is a member of the NYSE, FINRA and SIPC and part of ING, and which has accepted responsibility for the distribution of this report in the United States under applicable requirements.

Additional information is available on request. For more information about ING Group, please visit <http://www.ing.com>.