

Poland: Unconventional measures still far off

Market participants await details of non-standard monetary measures in the MPC's arsenal. However we think they're unlikely to be used anytime soon

Source: Shutterstock

As expected, Poland's central bank decided to leave rates unchanged (reference rate at 1.5%). We expect the Council to maintain its dovish bias during the press conference.

Last month, the MPC underlined that new NBP projections (due in March) should show a higher GDP trajectory but lower CPI, compared to the November forecasts. The statement also mentioned worse external growth. In our view, this may be partially offset by fiscal stimulus, which the ruling party, PiS, is preparing for 2019-2020. Governor Adam Glapinski again extended his forward guidance and said rates should remain flat until the end of the MPC's term (beginning of 2022). He also noted that the next move is more likely a cut, but this is far off in our view.

New, non-standard measures, in the MPC's arsenal have recently come into focus, with some market participants even expecting policy actions in parallel with the National Bank of Hungary. This is unjustified in our view (given the overliquidity of the local banking sector and presence of the banking tax).

We think the MPC has analysed instruments used by the NBH, the ECB and others, and a few MPC members may be keen to explore new options. But core members of the MPC, including the governor himself as well as experts from the National Bank of Poland are against it. The Hungarian case doesn't provide encouraging examples. "The confidence package" from 2009, recently mentioned by MPC member Eugeniusz Gatnar, is not needed at a time of banking sector overliquidity. The asset purchase programme run by the ECB may only be applicable for Polish government bonds (the corporate bond market is not deep enough), but this is not needed as the Ministry of Finance doesn't have a problem with funding. The actual problem is the crowding out of corporate credit by the bank tax (banks are keen to buy non-taxed POLGBs).

We hold our long-standing expectations for unchanged rates in 2019 and 2020. The next decision will be a cut in our view.

Author

Rafal Benecki

Chief Economist, Poland

rafal.benecki@ing.pl

Disclaimer

This publication has been prepared by the Economic and Financial Analysis Division of ING Bank N.V. ("ING") solely for information purposes without regard to any particular user's investment objectives, financial situation, or means. ING forms part of ING Group (being for this purpose ING Group N.V. and its subsidiary and affiliated companies). The information in the publication is not an investment recommendation and it is not investment, legal or tax advice or an offer or solicitation to purchase or sell any financial instrument. Reasonable care has been taken to ensure that this publication is not untrue or misleading when published, but ING does not represent that it is accurate or complete. ING does not accept any liability for any direct, indirect or consequential loss arising from any use of this publication. Unless otherwise stated, any views, forecasts, or estimates are solely those of the author(s), as of the date of the publication and are subject to change without notice.

The distribution of this publication may be restricted by law or regulation in different jurisdictions and persons into whose possession this publication comes should inform themselves about, and observe, such restrictions.

Copyright and database rights protection exists in this report and it may not be reproduced, distributed or published by any person for any purpose without the prior express consent of ING. All rights are reserved. ING Bank N.V. is authorised by the Dutch Central Bank and supervised by the European Central Bank (ECB), the Dutch Central Bank (DNB) and the Dutch Authority for the Financial Markets (AFM). ING Bank N.V. is incorporated in the Netherlands (Trade Register no. 33031431 Amsterdam). In the United Kingdom this information is approved and/or communicated by ING Bank N.V., London Branch. ING Bank N.V., London Branch is authorised by the Prudential Regulation Authority and is subject to regulation by the Financial Conduct Authority and limited regulation by the Prudential Regulation Authority. ING Bank N.V., London branch is registered in England (Registration number BR000341) at 8-10 Moorgate, London EC2 6DA. For US Investors: Any person wishing to discuss this report or effect transactions in any security discussed herein should contact ING Financial Markets LLC, which is a member of the NYSE, FINRA and SIPC and part of ING, and which has accepted responsibility for the distribution of this report in the United States under applicable requirements.

Additional information is available on request. For more information about ING Group, please visit www.ing.com.