

Powell confirms a September Fed rate cut

A September interest rate cut is coming with Fed Chair Powell telling us that "the time has come for policy to adjust. The direction of travel is clear." The market favours it being a 25bp move, but the 6 September jobs report will determine what happens. They don't want further weakness so another rise in unemployment to 4.4% or 4.5% could trigger a 50bp move

Fed Chair Powell announced today at the Jackson Hole Symposium that "the time has come for policy to adjust".

There are some strong comments coming through from Chair Powell at his Jackson Hole speech. We get the usual bits and pieces about inflation looking better and the focus is now much more on jobs, but he is as categorical as he can be with the statement "The time has come for policy to adjust. The direction of travel is clear". This follows on from the minutes to the July FOMC meeting, released on Wednesday, that said "the vast majority [of FOMC members] observed that, if the data continued to come in about as expected, it would likely be appropriate to ease policy at the next meeting".

There is no discussion of 25bp or 50bp at the September FOMC meeting – merely that "the timing and pace of rate cuts will depend on incoming data, the evolving outlook, and the balance of risks". Nonetheless, he does allude to the fact that they could cut rates a lot should conditions warrant it – "The current level of our policy rate gives us ample room to respond to any risks we may face, including the risk of unwelcome further weakening in labor market conditions."

There is currently around 33bp of cuts priced for the 18 September FOMC meeting and 100bp by year-end with a further 125bp of cuts next year. That looks fair given the current situation. Between now and the 18 September decision we have the core PCE deflator (30 August), which the market is confident on a 0.2% month-on-month print given the inputs from CPI and PPI. Then it is the jobs report on 6 September and that is the critical one. Note Powell today stated that “we don’t seek or welcome further cooling in labour market conditions”.

If we get a sub 100k on payrolls and the unemployment rate ticking up to 4.4% or even 4.5% then 50bp looks more likely. If payrolls comes in around the 150k mark and unemployment rate stays at 4.3% or dips to 4.2% we can safely say it will be a 25bp. Then on 11 September it is core CPI. 0.2% MoM or lower looks likely there – we are currently leaning in the direction of a possible 0.1% on the potential for the jump in July primary rents to reverse.

Author

James Knightley

Chief International Economist, US

james.knightley@ing.com

Disclaimer

This publication has been prepared by the Economic and Financial Analysis Division of ING Bank N.V. (“ING”) solely for information purposes without regard to any particular user's investment objectives, financial situation, or means. ING forms part of ING Group (being for this purpose ING Group N.V. and its subsidiary and affiliated companies). The information in the publication is not an investment recommendation and it is not investment, legal or tax advice or an offer or solicitation to purchase or sell any financial instrument. Reasonable care has been taken to ensure that this publication is not untrue or misleading when published, but ING does not represent that it is accurate or complete. ING does not accept any liability for any direct, indirect or consequential loss arising from any use of this publication. Unless otherwise stated, any views, forecasts, or estimates are solely those of the author(s), as of the date of the publication and are subject to change without notice.

The distribution of this publication may be restricted by law or regulation in different jurisdictions and persons into whose possession this publication comes should inform themselves about, and observe, such restrictions.

Copyright and database rights protection exists in this report and it may not be reproduced, distributed or published by any person for any purpose without the prior express consent of ING. All rights are reserved. ING Bank N.V. is authorised by the Dutch Central Bank and supervised by the European Central Bank (ECB), the Dutch Central Bank (DNB) and the Dutch Authority for the Financial Markets (AFM). ING Bank N.V. is incorporated in the Netherlands (Trade Register no. 33031431 Amsterdam). In the United Kingdom this information is approved and/or communicated by ING Bank N.V., London Branch. ING Bank N.V., London Branch is authorised by the Prudential Regulation Authority and is subject to regulation by the Financial Conduct Authority and limited regulation by the Prudential Regulation Authority. ING Bank N.V., London branch is registered in England (Registration number BR000341) at 8-10 Moorgate, London EC2 6DA. For US Investors: Any person wishing to discuss this report or effect transactions in any security discussed herein should contact ING Financial Markets LLC, which is a member of the NYSE, FINRA and SIPC and part of ING, and which has accepted responsibility for the distribution of this report in the United States under applicable requirements.

Additional information is available on request. For more information about ING Group, please visit <http://www.ing.com>.