

Riksbank hints at 2019 hike, defying ECB dovishness

The ongoing weakness in the Swedish krona means the Riksbank appears to be taking a more relaxed stance towards prospective ECB easing than in years gone by. Policymakers are hinting that a rate hike could come later this year, although we still have our doubts

A modestly hawkish outcome from the July Riksbank meeting

The Riksbank has opted to keep the repo rate on hold at -0.25% at its July meeting, but as ever the focus is on what policymakers have to say about the future path for rates. In what is probably a modestly hawkish move for markets, the Riksbank (RB) has kept its interest rate projection unchanged from April.

While it's true the domestic fundamentals haven't really shifted – for instance inflation has come in pretty much exactly in line with the RB's forecast – the major change is that global central bank expectations have completely collapsed since the last meeting just over two months ago. All else being equal, we'd have expected that to have modestly lowered the rate path. But following an in-depth look at krona fair value, the central bank is now forecasting a weaker currency over the forecast period and this appears to be the offsetting factor for lower overseas rate expectations.

All of this goes to show that the Riksbank is relatively unfazed by the prospect of a dovish ECB. While policymakers have often closely mirrored eurozone policy in the past, the fact that the krona has got steadily weaker over recent months has seen the RB take a more relaxed stance towards potential currency strength at recent meetings.

The Riksbank has kept its interest rate projection unchanged from April

Source: Riksbank, ING

Domestic and global risks suggest rates likely to remain on hold for the time being

But while we don't expect the Riksbank to follow the ECB into policy easing any time soon, we aren't convinced the Riksbank will increase interest rates either – or at least, not as soon as the central bank's guidance suggests.

While policymakers left global growth forecasts more or less unchanged, this is premised on the "information now available", hinting that they are quite aware that an escalation in trade tensions may yet throw a spanner in the works.

We also think there are risks to the domestic outlook. The Riksbank is projecting a pick up in wage growth next year, but a slight dip in inflation expectations among labour organisations suggests that the risks surrounding next spring's wage negotiations are biased towards a more lacklustre pay settlement.

All in all, we expect the Riksbank to keep rates on hold for the foreseeable future.

Author

James Smith

Developed Markets Economist

james.smith@ing.com

Disclaimer

This publication has been prepared by the Economic and Financial Analysis Division of ING Bank N.V. ("ING") solely for information purposes without regard to any particular user's investment objectives, financial situation, or means. ING forms part of ING Group (being for this purpose ING Group N.V. and its subsidiary and affiliated companies). The information in the publication is not an investment recommendation and it is not investment, legal or tax advice or an offer or solicitation to purchase or sell any financial instrument. Reasonable care has been taken to ensure that this publication is not untrue or misleading when published, but ING does not represent that it is accurate or complete. ING does not accept any liability for any direct, indirect or consequential loss arising from any use of this publication. Unless otherwise stated, any views, forecasts, or estimates are solely those of the author(s), as of the date of the publication and are subject to change without notice.

The distribution of this publication may be restricted by law or regulation in different jurisdictions and persons into whose possession this publication comes should inform themselves about, and observe, such restrictions.

Copyright and database rights protection exists in this report and it may not be reproduced, distributed or published by any person for any purpose without the prior express consent of ING. All rights are reserved. ING Bank N.V. is authorised by the Dutch Central Bank and supervised by the European Central Bank (ECB), the Dutch Central Bank (DNB) and the Dutch Authority for the Financial Markets (AFM). ING Bank N.V. is incorporated in the Netherlands (Trade Register no. 33031431 Amsterdam). In the United Kingdom this information is approved and/or communicated by ING Bank N.V., London Branch. ING Bank N.V., London Branch is authorised by the Prudential Regulation Authority and is subject to regulation by the Financial Conduct Authority and limited regulation by the Prudential Regulation Authority. ING Bank N.V., London branch is registered in England (Registration number BR000341) at 8-10 Moorgate, London EC2 6DA. For US Investors: Any person wishing to discuss this report or effect transactions in any security discussed herein should contact ING Financial Markets LLC, which is a member of the NYSE, FINRA and SIPC and part of ING, and which has accepted responsibility for the distribution of this report in the United States under applicable requirements.

Additional information is available on request. For more information about ING Group, please visit <http://www.ing.com>.