

Romania: Lending holding up well despite rising rates

Our credit growth index accelerated in March to 6.6% year-on-year from 6.3% in February, as Romanian leu (RON) lending still holds strong, posting a solid 15.9% YoY growth

Source: shutterstock

The acceleration of RON lending was driven mainly by consumer loans, which printed a surprisingly strong 5.2% month-on-month increase. This was the highest since December 2014 and second highest post-GFC and comes against a backdrop of rising interest rates over the past few months. The strength of consumer lending may be due to the effect of Easter and also the fact that many of these loans have a fixed rate and most banks have not yet begun to adjust their deposit/lending rates to the new market reality after the central bank tightened its liquidity management. Nevertheless, the RON loans usually linked to ROBOR fixing such as mortgages and corporate loans still posted a month-to-month acceleration, albeit a modest one, coming out at 1.9% and 1.8% respectively in March, compared to 1.8% and 0% in February. The share of RON in total lending has reached a new all-time high at 63.5% (from 62.9% in February). Corporate loans with maturities above five years expanded by 19.8% YoY, indicating that the prospects for private investments remain solid.

Consumer loans still holding strong

...even with the NBR in tightening mode

In our last lending report, we wrote that we didn't expect the central bank to raise interest rates fast enough or high enough to keep up with the acceleration in inflation this year, therefore keeping real rates deep in negative territory. Since then, the NBR has decided to implement firm liquidity management by organising regular one week full allotment deposit taking auctions, thus making the key rate more relevant for the cost of loans. Though these developments will probably help in containing inflation expectations and lead to a lower terminal rate in this hiking cycle, real rates will still remain in negative territory for most of this year (possibly even into the first part of 2019 as well). Hence, the consumption/savings decisions seem to be still in favour of the former.

Author

Valentin Tataru

Chief Economist, Romania

valentin.tataru@ing.com

Disclaimer

This publication has been prepared by the Economic and Financial Analysis Division of ING Bank N.V. (“ING”) solely for information purposes without regard to any particular user’s investment objectives, financial situation, or means. ING forms part of ING Group (being for this purpose ING Group N.V. and its subsidiary and affiliated companies). The information in the publication is not an investment recommendation and it is not investment, legal or tax advice or an offer or solicitation to purchase or sell any financial instrument. Reasonable care has been taken to ensure that this publication is not untrue or misleading when published, but ING does not represent that it is accurate or complete. ING does not accept any liability for any direct, indirect or consequential loss arising from any use of this publication. Unless otherwise stated, any views, forecasts, or estimates are solely those of the author(s), as of the date of the publication and are subject to change without notice.

The distribution of this publication may be restricted by law or regulation in different jurisdictions and persons into whose possession this publication comes should inform themselves about, and observe, such restrictions.

Copyright and database rights protection exists in this report and it may not be reproduced, distributed or published by any person for any purpose without the prior express consent of ING. All rights are reserved. ING Bank N.V. is authorised by the Dutch Central Bank and supervised by the European Central Bank (ECB), the Dutch Central Bank (DNB) and the Dutch Authority for the Financial Markets (AFM). ING Bank N.V. is incorporated in the Netherlands (Trade Register no. 33031431 Amsterdam). In the United Kingdom this information is approved and/or communicated by ING Bank N.V., London Branch. ING Bank N.V., London Branch is authorised by the Prudential Regulation Authority and is subject to regulation by the Financial Conduct Authority and limited regulation by the Prudential Regulation Authority. ING Bank N.V., London branch is registered in England (Registration number BR000341) at 8-10 Moorgate, London EC2 6DA. For US Investors: Any person wishing to discuss this report or effect transactions in any security discussed herein should contact ING Financial Markets LLC, which is a member of the NYSE, FINRA and SIPC and part of ING, and which has accepted responsibility for the distribution of this report in the United States under applicable requirements.

Additional information is available on request. For more information about ING Group, please visit <http://www.ing.com>.