

Romanian retail sales confirm economic slowdown

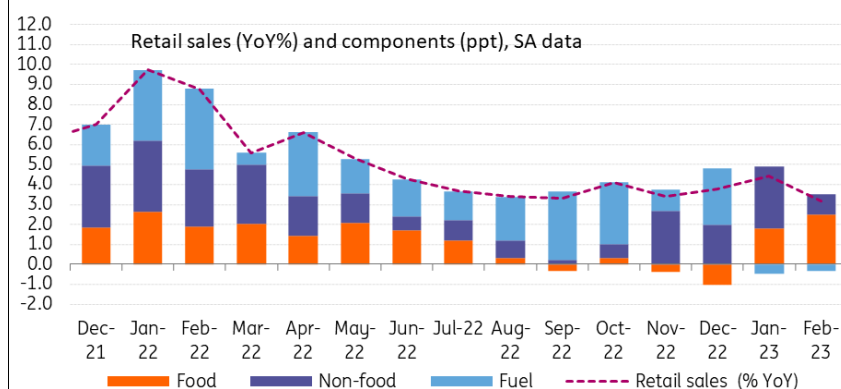

Private consumption in Romania seems to finally be showing credible signs of a slowdown. We are not overly worried about the data, as it largely matches our expectations for quarterly GDP growth to be almost flat in the first quarter. The question is whether the labour market will be resilient enough to provide a backstop to this slowdown

February 2023 retail sales data reveal a deceleration to 3.2% year-on-year growth in seasonally adjusted terms. Maybe more importantly, it also marked the second consecutive month of contraction versus the previous month, as sales declined by 0.6% in February after declining by 0.1% in January as well. The non-food component was the driving force behind February's slowdown, contracting by 3.2% in monthly terms (+2.2% YoY), while food and fuel sales remained in positive territory in both monthly and annual terms.

These developments have been largely anticipated, as a rebalance of the growth drivers from consumption towards investment was expected for 2023 and 2024.

Retail sales flattening at low levels

Source: NSI, ING

These figures are not overly surprising, but confirm expectations of an economic slowdown. They also match the trends we've been seeing for a while now in lending activity where the stock of personal loans trends towards very low single-digit growth, but also in budget revenue dynamics which is some 5.0% below the plan after the first quarter of 2023.

The strength of the labour market will, in our view, be key to how consumers behave in the coming months. Wage data for January show quite a strong momentum as wage growth averaged 15.0%, but we're not jumping to conclusions here as there is other data as well (hiring intentions, job creation) which largely offsets the wage story. Overall, while we do expect to see more signs of a somewhat looser labour market, average wage growth will likely exceed inflation in 2023 and provide a strong backstop for consumption. It will, however, take a couple of quarters before consumers gain more confidence and start to feel the positive real wage growth. Until then, cautiousness will prevail.

Retail sales and wage growth

Source: NSI, ING

Author

Valentin Tataru

Chief Economist, Romania

valentin.tataru@ing.com

Disclaimer

This publication has been prepared by the Economic and Financial Analysis Division of ING Bank N.V. (“ING”) solely for information purposes without regard to any particular user’s investment objectives, financial situation, or means. ING forms part of ING Group (being for this purpose ING Group N.V. and its subsidiary and affiliated companies). The information in the publication is not an investment recommendation and it is not investment, legal or tax advice or an offer or solicitation to purchase or sell any financial instrument. Reasonable care has been taken to ensure that this publication is not untrue or misleading when published, but ING does not represent that it is accurate or complete. ING does not accept any liability for any direct, indirect or consequential loss arising from any use of this publication. Unless otherwise stated, any views, forecasts, or estimates are solely those of the author(s), as of the date of the publication and are subject to change without notice.

The distribution of this publication may be restricted by law or regulation in different jurisdictions and persons into whose possession this publication comes should inform themselves about, and observe, such restrictions.

Copyright and database rights protection exists in this report and it may not be reproduced, distributed or published by any person for any purpose without the prior express consent of ING. All rights are reserved. ING Bank N.V. is authorised by the Dutch Central Bank and supervised by the European Central Bank (ECB), the Dutch Central Bank (DNB) and the Dutch Authority for the Financial Markets (AFM). ING Bank N.V. is incorporated in the Netherlands (Trade Register no. 33031431 Amsterdam). In the United Kingdom this information is approved and/or communicated by ING Bank N.V., London Branch. ING Bank N.V., London Branch is authorised by the Prudential Regulation Authority and is subject to regulation by the Financial Conduct Authority and limited regulation by the Prudential Regulation Authority. ING Bank N.V., London branch is registered in England (Registration number BR000341) at 8-10 Moorgate, London EC2 6DA. For US Investors: Any person wishing to discuss this report or effect transactions in any security discussed herein should contact ING Financial Markets LLC, which is a member of the NYSE, FINRA and SIPC and part of ING, and which has accepted responsibility for the distribution of this report in the United States under applicable requirements.

Additional information is available on request. For more information about ING Group, please visit www.ing.com.