

The Commodities Feed: Oil falters

Your daily roundup of commodity news and ING views

Energy

ICE Brent saw its biggest daily decline in over a month yesterday, with Brent settling just shy of 2% lower on the day. The prompt ICE Brent timespread also collapsed from a backwardation of US$0.80/bbl to US$0.54/bbl. Concerns over a pick-up in Covid-19 cases in some regions appears to have hit sentiment. The UK saw its highest number of daily cases yesterday since January, with the Delta variant spreading. This has led to worries over a return to international travel, and Hong Kong has now banned all flights from the UK due to the rising numbers of UK cases, while the EU has also tightened controls on UK travellers. Elsewhere, parts of Asia continue to see a large number of cases, which has led to an extension of restrictions. Malaysia has extended its lockdown, with cases not falling as quickly as hoped.

In addition to continued Covid-19 concerns, there is probably an element of speculators taking some risk off the table, with uncertainty over what OPEC+ may agree when they meet on Thursday. The group has surprised the market several times over the course of this deal, and so market participants wouldn't want to be caught off guard. According to Bloomberg, numbers which will be shared at the OPEC+ Joint Technical Committee meeting today, show that if output is kept unchanged, then the market is estimated to see a deficit of 1.7MMbbls/d over August, and an average deficit of 1.9MMbbls/d over 2H21.

Metals

LME aluminium managed to edge higher yesterday, following Friday's rally, after confirmation that Russia will impose temporary export duties on metals from 1 August until the end of the year. Primary aluminium exports will attract a base export duty of 15% plus US$254/t. Russia sells a significant amount of primary aluminium to Europe and Asia, and this move is likely to be supportive for regional aluminium premiums. Along with aluminium, the Russian government has also approved temporary export duties on 340 steel and non-ferrous metals. The government expects that these duties will generate around 160 billion rubles of revenue over the five-month period.

Author

Warren Patterson

Head of Commodities Strategy

Warren.Patterson@asia.ing.com

Disclaimer

This publication has been prepared by the Economic and Financial Analysis Division of ING Bank N.V. ("ING") solely for information purposes without regard to any particular user's investment objectives, financial situation, or means. ING forms part of ING Group (being for this purpose ING Group N.V. and its subsidiary and affiliated companies). The information in the publication is not an investment recommendation and it is not investment, legal or tax advice or an offer or solicitation to purchase or sell any financial instrument. Reasonable care has been taken to ensure that this publication is not untrue or misleading when published, but ING does not represent that it is accurate or complete. ING does not accept any liability for any direct, indirect or consequential loss arising from any use of this publication. Unless otherwise stated, any views, forecasts, or estimates are solely those of the author(s), as of the date of the publication and are subject to change without notice.

The distribution of this publication may be restricted by law or regulation in different jurisdictions and persons into whose possession this publication comes should inform themselves about, and observe, such restrictions.

Copyright and database rights protection exists in this report and it may not be reproduced, distributed or published by any person for any purpose without the prior express consent of ING. All rights are reserved. ING Bank N.V. is authorised by the Dutch Central Bank and supervised by the European Central Bank (ECB), the Dutch Central Bank (DNB) and the Dutch Authority for the Financial Markets (AFM). ING Bank N.V. is incorporated in the Netherlands (Trade Register no. 33031431 Amsterdam). In the United Kingdom this information is approved and/or communicated by ING Bank N.V., London Branch. ING Bank N.V., London Branch is authorised by the Prudential Regulation Authority and is subject to regulation by the Financial Conduct Authority and limited regulation by the Prudential Regulation Authority. ING Bank N.V., London branch is registered in England (Registration number BR000341) at 8-10 Moorgate, London EC2 6DA. For US Investors: Any person wishing to discuss this report or effect transactions in any security discussed herein should contact ING Financial Markets LLC, which is a member of the NYSE, FINRA and SIPC and part of ING, and which has accepted responsibility for the distribution of this report in the United States under applicable requirements.

Additional information is available on request. For more information about ING Group, please visit <http://www.ing.com>.