

Turkey's trade balance improves significantly

A sharp contraction in imports determined the pace of trade balance recovery in the second half of 2018 and December was no exception either. We expect this trend to remain in place in the first half of 2019, but the pace will likely slow down given the recent lira strength and moderating EU demand

Foreign trade has been significantly improving since the second half of 2018 thanks to an adjustment in imports. In December the deficit came in at USD 2.7 billion which is almost a 71% decline over the same month in 2017.

The 12-month rolling deficit stood at USD 55.0 billion, significantly down from its cyclical peak at USD 87.2 billion in May 2018. Importantly, the 12-month trailing core balance (excluding gold and energy trade) stood at USD-11.0 billion - the best reading since early 2004 showing external rebalancing momentum.

Evolution of core imports and exports

Source: TurkStat, ING Bank

According to monthly data, confirming the normalisation in gold imports with a continuous decline since 2Q18 on an annual basis, total imports plummeted by 28.3% (the fifth double-digit contraction in a row starting and the biggest since the global crisis) to USD 16.6 billion.

This can be blamed on the deterioration in domestic demand and cautiousness of companies who cut production and were relying on inventories in times of volatility.

On the other hand, exports have remained solid until December thanks to recovering price competitiveness. However, the last month of 2018 shows signs of weakening with a flat reading - the slightly negative figure for the core, excluding gold and energy, likely due to softening growth outlook in Europe, which is the destination for roughly half of Turkish exports.

A sharp import contraction determined the pace of recovery in the trade balance, while exports that generally move in tandem with imports have performed relatively well so far and contributed to the external rebalancing.

This trend will remain in place in the first half of this year, though the pace will likely slow down given the recent lira strength and moderating EU demand.

Author

Muhammet Mercan

Chief Economist, Turkey

muhammet.mercan@ingbank.com.tr

Disclaimer

This publication has been prepared by the Economic and Financial Analysis Division of ING Bank N.V. ("ING") solely for information purposes without regard to any particular user's investment objectives, financial situation, or means. ING forms part of ING Group (being for this purpose ING Group N.V. and its subsidiary and affiliated companies). The information in the publication is not an investment recommendation and it is not investment, legal or tax advice or an offer or solicitation to purchase or sell any financial instrument. Reasonable care has been taken to ensure that this publication is not untrue or misleading when published, but ING does not represent that it is accurate or complete. ING does not accept any liability for any direct, indirect or consequential loss arising from any use of this publication. Unless otherwise stated, any views, forecasts, or estimates are solely those of the author(s), as of the date of the publication and are subject to change without notice.

The distribution of this publication may be restricted by law or regulation in different jurisdictions and persons into whose possession this publication comes should inform themselves about, and observe, such restrictions.

Copyright and database rights protection exists in this report and it may not be reproduced, distributed or published by any person for any purpose without the prior express consent of ING. All rights are reserved. ING Bank N.V. is authorised by the Dutch Central Bank and supervised by the European Central Bank (ECB), the Dutch Central Bank (DNB) and the Dutch Authority for the Financial Markets (AFM). ING Bank N.V. is incorporated in the Netherlands (Trade Register no. 33031431 Amsterdam). In the United Kingdom this information is approved and/or communicated by ING Bank N.V., London Branch. ING Bank N.V., London Branch is authorised by the Prudential Regulation Authority and is subject to regulation by the Financial Conduct Authority and limited regulation by the Prudential Regulation Authority. ING Bank N.V., London branch is registered in England (Registration number BR000341) at 8-10 Moorgate, London EC2 6DA. For US Investors: Any person wishing to discuss this report or effect transactions in any security discussed herein should contact ING Financial Markets LLC, which is a member of the NYSE, FINRA and SIPC and part of ING, and which has accepted responsibility for the distribution of this report in the United States under applicable requirements.

Additional information is available on request. For more information about ING Group, please visit <http://www.ing.com>.