The ECB’s Dashboard: Angry birds

The market rout of recent weeks should not impact the ECB’s assessment. The oil price and the euro developments (which interest the Eurozone’s monetary policymakers more than the volatility in the stock market) suggest unchanged CPI forecast. The 2018 GDP forecast should be revised upwards.

Despite little inflationary pressure, the end of QE is getting closer. The risk of deflation is clearly behind us, and the only question is how to moderate and implement this exit.

What this means for markets

FX market: One step closer to the end of QE = higher EUR/USD

Our base case of (a) a modest shift in the ECB forward guidance, (b) no clear ECB attempt to talk down the EUR (as the euro is in fact not strong); and (c) an upward revision to the growth forecast, point to higher EUR/USD, with the cross likely to break above the 1.25 level.

The expected path of ECB policy stance holds the key towards a higher EUR/USD, with the cross

Bond markets: Minor upside to yields

Heading into the Italian elections rates were depressed by the associated uncertainty and Trump’s push for tariffs potentially triggering a trade war. Although concerns have eased somewhat, and rates have risen, markets may still be expecting a cautious ECB. Tweaking the guidance thus holds some minor upside risks to yields.

Scenario analysis: How to position for Draghi’s alternatives

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Current stance</th>
<th>Inflation outlook</th>
<th>Growth outlook</th>
<th>Reference to the EUR level</th>
<th>QE taper guidance</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Very dovish</td>
<td>“Underlying inflation is expected to rise gradually”</td>
<td>“The risks... to growth outlook are broadly balanced”</td>
<td>“Volatility in exchange rate is source of uncertainty...”</td>
<td>ECB “stands ready to increase” QE “in size and/or the duration”</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Very hawkish</td>
<td>“Upside risks” to the inflation outlook</td>
<td>Risks to growth outlook are to the “upside”</td>
<td>The EUR level not a concern to the Governing Council</td>
<td>Asset purchases to end by Sep 2018</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

All eyes are on the ECB’s forward guidance. We don’t expect a hint at when QE could end, but look for subtle change in the language that signals it is already en route to the exit.

The ECB’s readiness to increase QE “in size and/or the duration” may be dropped and replaced by the readiness “to use all tools available”, which would be a very mild form of dropping the QE easing bias. This should for now satisfy the growing dissent among the ECB hawks within the in-house bird fight.
Disclaimer

This publication has been prepared by ING (being the Wholesale Banking business of ING Bank N.V. and certain subsidiary companies) solely for information purposes. It is not an investment recommendation and it is not investment, legal or tax advice or an offer or solicitation to purchase or sell any financial instrument. Reasonable care has been taken to ensure that this publication is not untrue or misleading when published, but ING does not represent that it is accurate or complete. ING does not accept any liability for any direct, indirect or consequential loss arising from any use of this publication. Unless otherwise stated, any views, forecasts, or estimates are solely those of the author(s), as of this date and are subject to change without notice.

The distribution of this publication may be restricted by law or regulation in different jurisdictions and persons into whose possession this publication comes should inform themselves about, and observe, such restrictions.

Copyright and database rights protection exists in this publication. All rights are reserved.

The producing legal entity ING Bank N.V. is authorised by the Dutch Central Bank and supervised by the European Central Bank (ECB), the Dutch Central Bank and the Dutch Authority for the Financial Markets (AFM). ING Bank N.V. is incorporated in the Netherlands (Trade Register no. 33031431 Amsterdam). In the United Kingdom this information is approved and/or communicated by ING Bank N.V., London Branch. ING Bank N.V., London Branch is subject to limited regulation by the Financial Conduct Authority (FCA). ING Bank N.V., London branch is registered in England (Registration number BR000341) at 8-10 Moorgate, London EC2 6DA.

For US Investors: Any person wishing to discuss this report or effect transactions in any security discussed herein should contact ING Financial Markets LLC, which is a member of the NYSE, FINRA and SIPC and part of ING, and which has accepted responsibility for the distribution of this report in the United States under applicable requirements.